How To Sell Your Stuff on the Web

This is a brief rundown of what to sell where and how much it will cost you, according to Michael Miller, author of Selling Online 2.0.

On eBay: Sellers usually pay 8.75 percent of the sales price up to $25, with a declining percentage on larger sales, plus upfront fees of 10 cents to $4 or more. This is whether or not the item sells.

Some of the best items to sell on eBay: antiques, high-end bicycles, rare collectables, jewelry that is unique, modern or antique golf clubs, high-end skis, and old or collectible items including art.

On Amazon.com: Sellers set fixed prices and usually pay a commission of 15 percent (commissions are lower on electronics and cameras), plus a 99-cent transaction fee. On Amazon, you won't have to pay the listing fee if the item doesn't sell.

The best items to sell on Amazon include DVDs, CDs, recent electronics, video games and books. Book buyers shop at Amazon.

On Craigslist: Listing items on Craigslist is free. The listings are divided into regional Web sites. Buyers generally come to the seller's home and pay cash.

The best items to sell on Craigslist are furniture, exercise equipment, cars, boats, RVs, musical instruments, regular or low-end skis, common golf clubs and electronics. Sell items like toys, hand tools and clothing in lots.

Perhaps the very best question that you can memorize and repeat, over and over, is: What is the most valuable use of my time right now?

The Lighter Side... "Oxymorons"

Why is the third hand on the watch called the second hand?

Why do "fat chance" and "slim chance" mean the same thing?

Why do we sing "Take me out to the ball game" when we are already there?

Why are they called "stands" when they are made for sitting?

Why is "phonics" not spelled the way it sounds?

If all the world is a stage, where is the audience sitting?

Computer Games are Good Teaching Tools for Kids

Computer and video games have been decried as bad for kids because they are too time-consuming and offer no exercise. Wii games are an exception.

While a small percentage of children have been found playing games for hours on end, those who play for shorter periods gain some significant benefits, including improved hand-eye coordination. One study done in the United Kingdom concludes that, "video games can stimulate learning of facts and skills such as strategic thinking, creativity, cooperation and innovative thinking, all of which are important in the information society."

Microsoft's Play Smart, Play Safe study surveyed parents and found they thought games are "a great social experience." Sixty-one percent of parents allowed their children to play games labeled at a higher age rating.

While half of parents said games bring families closer together, 69 percent of kids wanted their parents to keep a closer eye on the age certificates of the games they played.
